“ Allison and I were friends so long that I can't even remember when our friendship began. In high school we would randomly drive the backroads getting lost and then excited when we finally saw something familiar and knew where we were again. So many memories and so much time spent together that at times I didn't know where I stopped and she began. Even though we lost touch over the years, we would reconnect when I was able to come to town, and she was never far from my mind. The news of her passing reached me only hours before her service, and while I'm not able to be there in person, I send my heart. My greatest sympathies to her husband, children, and extended family.

“ Allison and I were best friends in High School for a few years, until I graduated and moved away. We hung out day and night. We would lay on the floor listening to Jewel and Tori Amos talking for hours about life and what we wanted. I am in utter shock that she has gone so soon. I sadly am not able to make it this evening, but she will be and has been on my mind. My deepest condolences to her husband and children and family. She was special to me and I have always thought of her with happiness. We lost touch, but I never stopped loving and missing the memories we shared.
