“ My memories of Emma was when Jack and Emma were managers of a apartment complex in Paramount. How she loved Elvis Presley and church activities. It was nice chatting with Bill and Donna the other day! May God comfort and strengthen you. With love Eric Anderson

“ In another land, not here, we'll know the meaning of each tear when we look upon His nail scarred hands, it's then, oh, then we'll understand. When sorrow seems so hard to bear, and the darkest night cannot compare with the loneliness that lingers near when we've lost a loved one sweet and dear. But dry your eyes and weep no more for the loved one on the other shore, for they have seen His nail scarred hands and now, yes, now they understand. We cannot look beyond the stars, we cannot see our Saviours scars, but when the mists at His command, have rolled away from the other land, it's then, oh, then we'll understand. So trust in the friend that's true and tried, they are not dead, but with Him abide. And as he gently takes their hand, it's then, oh, then they'll understand. Written in 1976 for her children and grandchildren and all to come thereafter Author:
